What's on my mind?

Asian risk assets opened mixed ahead of an eventful week. The first FOMC due this month (29th-30th) would be key for broader markets to assess the path for rate hikes and policy setting. Market expectations and positioning are now converging as compared to what we witnessed throughout 2018. No change is expected in the Fed's strategy of reducing its bond holdings, and rates are forecast to remain unchanged.

US Treasury yields edged lower to 1.74% and the dollar steadied. WTI fell to near $53 a barrel as a standoff between the U.S. and Venezuela eased. China indices were marked higher after PBOC's $37bn of potential bank lending ease.

Asian borrowers across HY and IG have released guidance on multiple bond issuance. Hyundai Capital, China Molybdenum Co, Kookmin Bank, China Grand Auto, Road King, Yuzhou Properties, Jingrui Holdings, Fortune star (FOSUN), and Fantasia holdings to name a few.

Chinese President Xi's top economic aide, Vice Premier Liu He, will meet with U.S. Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer and Treasury Secretary Steven Mnuchin on Wednesday and Thursday. Without a pact by the March 1 deadline, the U.S. could lift its import tariffs on Chinese goods to 25% from 10%.

US President Donald Trump agreed to reopen the government after signing a deal to keep operations running until mid-February despite not winning any concessions from Democrats to finance his US-Mexico border wall project. Coming only a few days after a White House adviser indicated the shutdown would mean no growth in Q1, the overall impact of the government shutdown should be relatively muted. The reopening of the government hasn't eliminated tension between the President and Congress and there is a risk that no spending bill can be agreed upon by mid-February, resulting in another government shutdown. However, public sentiment appeared strongly against the president in relation to the shutdown and Trump may be wary of using the same tactics again. The resumption of government services will allow for data to publish once again, providing markets with a clearer understanding of the performance of the US economy. (Emirates NBD Research)

Saudi Arabia's seeking $425 billion in investment by 2030 for infrastructure, energy, mining and other works, Energy Minister Khalid Al-Falih told Bloomberg. The plan, to be unveiled by Crown Prince Mohammed Bin Salman today, aims to cut Riyadh's reliance on oil. Saudi Aramco will retain exclusive rights to its oil reserves ahead of a planned IPO. The company is buying up to a 19.9% stake in Hyundai Oilbank for as much as 1.8 trillion won ($1.6 billion).
